Child Care Center Installs ParentWatch Live Internet Viewing Service At The NASA Johnson Space Center

NEW YORK--(BUSINESS WIRE)--December 4, 2000--Employees using the NASA Johnson Space Center's child care center in Houston, Texas this fall will be able to watch their children live on the Internet courtesy of ParentWatch, the industry leader in online child care services.

ParentWatch announced today the installation of its Live Internet Viewing (Video) Services in the Houston center, operated by the Space Family Education, Inc. (SFEI), a non-profit corporation.

ParentWatch's video services enables parents to view their children at the SFEI center by logging on to the ParentWatch Web site. The video service is designed to help parents stay in touch with their children throughout the day and foster a sense of comfort in both parents and children. The contract with SFEI is for a five-year period.

"Our goal is to help improve the quality of child care in America by providing technologies to centers that connect working parents to their children and the center workers who care for them," said ParentWatch Chairman and CEO Adam Aronson. "It is an honor to have our Video service selected for the SFEI child care facility."

ParentWatch's technology provides high-quality video images over a highly secure Internet connection, allowing parents and other family members to watch live video images of their children from their personal computers. In addition, ParentWatch offers other interactive opportunities, such as the ParentWatch Community Site, a Web site administered by center directors, which provides parents with the ability to monitor ongoing child care center events, lunch menus and class schedules.

"Our parents feel that they have a better peace of mind with the video service," said Kristy Hirning, executive director of the SFEI center. "The parents at our center are all naturally tech-savvy and they love being able to check in with their kids using ParentWatch's interactive services while they are away at work."

New York-based ParentWatch has been offering video links to child care centers and schools via the Internet since 1998 and is now the country's leading provider of this service. In addition to the video service and the Community Site, ParentWatch features a comprehensive resource center for parents and child care providers that offers up-to-date articles on a variety of child-related topics, links with complementary Web sites and online shopping.
